

Patricia Flores Ed.D.

Dr. Patricia Flores is passionately dedicated to building teacher expertise in bi-literacy as well as integrated and designated ELD in order to ensure academic achievement for English Learners. Dr. Flores career spans almost 30 years in public education as an elementary school teacher, secondary counselor, as well as at the secondary site and district level administrator responsible for English Learner services. She currently teaches second language acquisition at Cal State Los Angeles as an adjunct professor. Her research focused on closing the achievement gap for English Learners, and building teacher expertise in bi-literacy, integrated and designated ELD, and dual language programs. She continues to provide professional development, coaching, and training to educators, building their capacity to open doors for all students.
